I have discussed that Anno MUNDI was changed to Anno Domini (meaning year of our Lord) in 525 AD by Dionysius Exiguus on behalf of the Christian Church, because they expected planetary approaches of Venus, Mars & their moons, or other planet size Comets that would cause an "End of the World" scenario.

This date was based on the resurrection & return of Jesus Christ (meaning a Comet approach & alignment of Planets, could it be the 575 year cycle between Venus-Earth-Jupiter). The (astronomical information encrypted) in the Revelation of John the Baptist was also used to arrive at this date.

The Scythian Dionysius Exiguus and His Invention of Anno Domini

Several Comets were seen in 12 BC, 5 BC & 4 BC, but one fit the description of Matthew, announcing the birth of the messiah & the astronomers or 'wise men' looked for several signs to find him; including planetary alignments of Mars, Jupiter & Saturn in Pisces:

The Star of Bethlehem was a Comet:

A little about Jesus or Yeshua:

The reason that they called the new Christian Calendar Anno Domini, is because they chose Yeshua or Jesus as the messiah or "Christ" (The word "Christ" means anointed. It comes from the Greek Χριστός, cristos, and is a translation of the Hebrew word for Messiah, מָשִׁיחַ, meshiyach, which means anointed or chosen one, it was used in Ancient Egypt and since Sumerian times, each time the world was expected to end by planetary catastrophes. The job of the messiahs or Saviours was to convert the souls of 'sinners' or non believers, in order to be saved from suffering during the catastrophes or to be freed from slavery, by joining a specific religion, so the Abrahamic religions have had contending messiahs arriving just before the catastrophes in order to gain converts to their own religion, until the present times & throughout history.

The Christian sect of the Essen, used Pythagorean astrological knowledge to calculate the approach of Comets or Planets (& probably of Mars, because Venus had approached Earth in 44BC), which would bring the apocalypse (as preached by John the Baptist) & catastrophes to End the World, bringing a New World Order, the "Day of the Lord" & proclamation of a Saviour Messiah. John the Baptist was a Pythagorean Astronomer or Prophet, who expected the World to come to an End at the time of Yeshua/Jesus; or around 30 AD, his message was to repent, baptize & convert the people of Israel for the coming of the Lord (the Comet or Planet that would cause the catastrophe). Orthodox Jews did not consider Yeshua to be messiah, but instead they considered James, Yeshua's brother to be the messiah.

John the Baptist calculated the End at the time of Yeshua/Jesus; or around 30 AD, his message was to prepare (baptize & convert) the people of Israel for the coming of the Lord (the Comet or Planet). He re-calculated the End Times to 33 AD (during the Jewish Passover= passing of the comet over Earth), & expecting an apocalypse started his ministry and Yeshua's ministry for that reason. The apocalypse would take place during the comet's electric interactions with Earth. The Gospels make clear Jesus was crucified during the Jewish festival of Passover. That was the reason for that day is referred to as the Last Supper.

When the recalculation of the End of Times did not come to pass, due to the comet changing orbit, Yeshua was crucified. From the writings of Josephus Flavius, seem that because John The Baptist was considered the messiah by some & had a very large following; he spent a lot of time away in the desert, living of honey and locust; most likely due to the fact that there were famines, pandemics, pestilence & disease like leprosy (radiation sickness) due to the comet's approaching. The Templars were worshipping the head of John the Baptist when the Church tortured them to make them confess their unfaithfulness to the Roman Church. Some tribes still worship him in the Middle East. John the baptist was beheaded in 36 AD by Herod of Antipas, to prevent him taking the power, but as usual a woman (Herod's wife) was blamed for the beheading.

There is some interesting information historian Israel Knohl found recently on a stone tablet called Gabriel's stone, where allegedly 2 messiahs were supposed to be born, one of the line of King David and the second from the line of Joseph. And that there was one man Simon called 'God's Shepard' (to lead the sheep ;P) who had a large following before he was killed & resurrected (into a comet seen after his death) shortly before Jesus time.

According to some gnostic including L. Gardner, Yeshua didn't die at the cross, and his uncle Joseph of Arimathea one of the 70 Jewish elders left with pregnant Mary (Lady) Magdalene to Britain, she gave birth to Yesua's children (daughters and two boys, Jesus & Joseph Jr.) according to Laurence Gardner, Arthur's lineage sprang from her & Jesus (a double line of King David, represented by a white Unicorn or spade), and that is what the quest for Percival finding the Holy Grail are all about (according to some, including Sir Laurence Gardner it means Sangreal or Sangre Real (which is latin for Royal Blood.) It is well known that the birth & death of great kings & rulers, as well as messiah's was accompanied by sightings of Comets. And the painting depicting the Knights of the round Table sitting and having a vision of the Holy Grail, the Holy Grail is depicted as being carried by 2 Angels, & Angels symbolize Comets announcing the coming of a saviour. Iconography of Arthur includes dragon which are comets and & unicorns (representing King Davids' bloodline) Remember the movie Legend?

By the way, many messiah saviours have been also shown with horns like bulls or rams, like the Anunas, Moses, Marduk/ Zeus Ammon, Cyrus, Alexander the Great, Yeshua, to name a few; and this was also depicting the plasma tails of Comets or Planets in glow mode as seen from Earth.

We know that the Lion represented the lineage from the goddess Inana; and the Owl, represented lineage from the goddess Lilith. We can see that there are several people who claim lineage from King Davids' line & there are several versions of Arthurian kings, which I'm sure existed, but what is true, I don't know; I'm just putting out there fascinating information & sources I have come across, & I leave it up to you to decide what's what. I always like to get the big picture & not focus on the details. I see bloodlines fighting for control, using natural phenomena & ongoing catastrophes, to gain power & control of the populations who are considered a different race & their property.

The secret astronomical knowledge and genealogies brought to Britain by Joseph of Arimathea became known as the Kolbrin bible.

I suggest reading Sir Laurence Gardner's Genesis of the Grail Kings to find out more alternative information about the contending bloodlines of the Gnostic, Scots & the Catholic Church, among other, who don't walk the talk & have been fighting for control & power for a very long time, causing great suffering to everyone living on the planet.

The 2 comet(s) depicted in a mural of the crucifixion, also caused violent earthquakes and a 3 hour eclipse of the sun, so it must have been very close to Earth and a large celestial body: The Gospel of Luke (23:44) describes the phenomenon like this: "And it was now about the sixth hour, and darkness fell over the whole land until the ninth hour, the sun being obscured...."

Yeshua /Jesus, like Julius Caesar in 44 BC, was said latter by the Christian Church, to have translated or resurrected into a Star or the comet seen during his crucifixion. A famous depiction of Christ's Ascension is the Christus Helios, a late third century Roman ceiling mosaic, which is said to show Jesus as the sun god Helios (Sol or Sol Invictus) riding to heaven in his chariot. Sol Invictus refers to our Sun, & unconquered refers to the Sun not having gone nova due to an approach of another star or red dwarf) & that Earth's orbit is still captured by it. We find a similar depiction before Jesus ascension into the Sun Helios, in the first century BC, a relief depicting the apotheosis and ascension of Caesar as Divus Iulius ("God or Divine Julius") riding to heaven in his chariot. Julius Caesar claimed descent from Athena/Venus the terrestrial female ruler, through the line of Aeneas, prince of Troy. The main characteristics are exactly the same: god, chariot, wheel, horses with raised forelegs, plants, and the general theme of ascension.

<https://divusjulius.wordpress.com/2010/05/13/ascensionschristcaesar/>

Caesar received his state funeral and resurrection as god on the third day after his death, the day of the Liberalia, a Roman festival for the god Liber Pater, an early syncretistic variant of Dionysus. The rays coming out from Jesus' head might not be the rays of the sun, but depict a comet, similarly to the sidus Iulium ("Julian star"), the great comet of 44 BC. Caesar was officially consecrated in 42 BC, which was the apotheosis of the Roman imperial cult that also included the ascension of Julius into the god & Star. But the comet, which appeared in July 44 BC during Caesar's funeral games, was seen by the people as Caesar's soul in heaven, a popular ascension before the senatorial consecratio one and a half years later. During this time Octavian crowned all statues of Divus Iulius with replicas of the comet, and this was the origin of the nimbus or halo with rays symbols used in early Christianity. Many emperors and messiahs portrayed themselves with a halo and a cross inside it, as if they controlled or embodied the Comet/Planet causing catastrophes with its tails. This is the symbol known also as a Sun Disk. Saints after their death were also shown with a halo as if they had converted into the Comet seen at their death. Note: Many early Christians used to pray toward the east, and not toward Jerusalem, awaiting Jesus as the "Light from the East", can be explained by the fact that Caesar in heaven, "the brightest star of the universe" (Val. Max. 6.9.15), appeared in the northern sky and moved from east to set in the west (Ramsey-Licht 1997, 130–32). Remember that Mohammed after arch Gabriel (planet Mars?) visited him, he changed the direction of prayer from the east to west due to an axial tilt or pole shift?

It is interesting that the Jewish born Apostle Paul (originally named Saul), who was a prosecutor of Yeshua's followers ("Christians") became a Roman Citizen, chose Jesus as the Messiah, instead of John the Baptist, or Jesus' brother James. Paul was killed in 70 AD, he was shown as ascending into the comets seen at the time 64-68 AD that caused many disasters & great conflagrations including that of Rome & Jerusalem. Emperor Nero who also had his mother & family members killed in fear they would take the power away from him, died due to the plagues in 70 AD. In 64 AD the Great fires in Rome were blamed on Nero by his enemies, but then he blamed the Christians who were crucified & burned on the cross. In Jerusalem's great fire in 68 AD, the blame was put on the Romans, and on and on it goes...

I suggest you read my eBook or watch my video 'End Times & the Essen' under my playlist 'hidden comet history' for more details about this era.

It seems that John the Baptist was the favourite of the masses until he was killed by Herod Antipas. Yeshua was a hellenistic Jew (Nazarene) & wanted the gentiles to convert; this was unacceptable to the Orthodox Jews. And Yeshua's brother James, had the favour of the people (& of the Orthodox Jews?) but he was murdered by the High Priest Ananus. The followers of John the Baptist, Jesus, and James, in contrast to those influenced by Paul (who created Christianity with less rigid rules than Judaism (i.e. circumcision & abstinence), shaped their post-crucifixion hopes and future expectations on an apocalyptic Messianic vision that focused on the arrival of the Kingdom of God on Earth and the fulfillment of the promises of the Hebrew Prophets (Isaiah 2:2-4; Zechariah 14; Isaiah 11; Micah 5:2-4; Jeremiah 30-31). But have those promises ever been fulfilled? Or have they been the carrot in front of the horse in order to lead it? You have to read history to realize that the same techniques of control, divide the peoples and manipulation have been used over and over & the masses sadly, fall for them every single time.

A little about Emperor Constantine:

In 323 AD, a Comet appeared in the sign of Virgo. After the comet appeared the Arian Heresy prevailed, so that the Christian world (as Jerome speaks) sighed to see it self become Arian. The wars between Constantine and Licinius happened about that time, which caused great changes, the whole Empire being turned upside down due to calamities, plagues, etc. The frightful disasters spoken of in the twelfth Chapter of the Revelation were now taking place.

A comet is also recorded in 321 AD, and a universal famine in Britain occurred in 325 AD. People must have been made to believe the End of the World was near, due to the catastrophes and Constantine 'converted' to Christianity and proclaimed himself "the Saviour" after he saw two comets, in 321 AD & 323 AD; with tails that looked like a cross superimposed on a sphere of light the celestial body or nucleus of the comet) on the eve of a battle with his rival for the throne of Rome.

Eusebius describes one of Constantine's sightings as 'vision' which really means 'sighting' (to see with your eyes) while marching at midday in which "he saw with his own eyes in the heavens and a trophy of the cross arising from the light of the sun, carrying the message, In Hoc Signo Vinces" ("with this sign, you shall win" —the sig was a slanted X, the tails of the comet). He asked his oracle (astronomers?) the meaning of the "vision." He also had a dream of Jesus followed by a vision of the comet and was told by the oracle (the oration) who moved away from the Tetrarchy (the twin dynasties of Jupiter and Hercules-Mars) and proclaimed that Constantine experienced a divine vision of Apollo (Sol Invictus/Sun) does this mean that we got too close to the Sun & it zapped Earth?? An omen for victory granting him laurel wreaths of health and a long reign. As Apollo, Constantine recognized himself as the saviour to whom "rule of the whole world" would be granted. In his early reign, the Constantine coins advertised Mars as his divine lineage. From 310 AD on, Mars was replaced by Sol Invictus (The Unconquered Sun) or Apollo. He did the same as Julius Caesar when Venus approached, Julius claimed to descend from the goddess Venus. There is little reason to believe that either the dynastic connection together with the sighting of the Comets and the proclamation of being the saviour, strengthened Constantine's claims to legitimacy and increased his popularity among the citizens of Gaul.

In 337 (or 335) AD a stupendously big & bright Comet (called an omen of the death of Constantine) and frightening to behold, was seen in the sign of Aries during six Months. Immediately after Constantine the Great died, the Roman Empire was under conflict, his Son Constantius being an Arian, began persecuting & killing the Christians putting the blame of the miseries & disasters brought on by the comets on them, so the population wouldn't turn against him.

FALL OF THE ROMAN EMPIRE (400 to 500 AD)

The Romans went to Britain around 33 AD, probably due to the devastation & catastrophes caused by the Comets seen during Yeshua's lifetime. And it seems there was ongoing products & merchandise being brought & traded from the Mediterranean. It does seem that Britain was also occupied long before the Romans arrived during the Mesolithic era and the structures are called Roman, but the style of architecture originates in Atlantis, which can be seen at Ba'albek. In Britain we can see there are remains of beautiful villas and roman buildings buried by many floods, tsunamis & earthquakes.

In the city of Bath, was found a Temple & worship of Poseidon (Neptune) facing East, Solis Minerva (Sun-Venus Minerva. Interesting name!) Luna (Moon) & Sol (Sun). The date of around 306 (soon before the approach of 2 comets) foreshadowed the collapse of the Roman Empire.

Now, I will go into the descriptions of the catastrophes & plagues linked to a huge amount of comet sightings, included in Noah Webster's book, and in Kometographia by Increase Mather, beginning in the year 400 AD.

"We have arrived at another singular and distressing period of the history of man. In the year 400, under the rule of Arcadius and Honorius, a comet appeared of a large size and horrible shape. Its immense tail seemed to sweep the earth, and Baronius, the pious author of Ecclesiastical Records or Annals, remarks, that many of the Gentiles were terrified due to the comet appearance so decided to get baptized & convert into christians. During the or appearance, happened one of the most (...) terrible calamity on record. The Sea was covered with (blood?) 10 days. A drouth is mentioned under the same period, which was so severe that the heavens were like (fire?) Unfortunately historians have often neglected to arrange these phenomena in due order, throwing them into a general description.

The same period was marked by deluges of rain, and from the narration, it appears that the rains preceded the hard winter of the year 400. The rivers were so swollen that the imperial generals could not cross into the east to attack Sardis. Severe earthquakes occurred in the same year.

Circiter records that in 402 AD an extremely bright Comet in shape like a Sword was seen. After this Gainus attempted to conquer Constantinople. Stilicus won the war against the Goths. Emperor Arcadius died. An Army of no less than two hundred thousand Barbarians under Radagiso, invaded the Roman Empire. The first Trumpet (which John speaks of in the Apocalypse) sounded at this time. There were fifty terrible earthquakes in the Roman Empire following a storm of Hail, and Fire, and Blood (Rev. 87) Mr. Mede interpreted. The Christians were first persecuted in Persia & then in Africa by the Donatists, within a year or two.

From Baron. vol 4. 20. P. Diac. lib. 13. About the year 407 or 408, near the close of the reign of Arcadius, a rare celestial phenomenon was seen by the astonished world. It was called a comet, but did not resemble one of the ordinary figure. It resembled a cone or pillar, but had not the appearance of a star, so much as of the flame. Its motion was not regular—it began to move from the point of the heavens where the sun rises at the equinoxes, and passing the tail of Ursa, proceeded to the west. It covered the whole of the heavens—its vertex, at some times, extended to a great length; at others, was contracted into the figure of a cone. After being visible for four months, it disappeared. This is the description of it, in the words of Nicephorus. Meteors were observed at the same period. Accompanying and following these phenomena, were some of the most distressing calamities. Violent earthquakes levelled cities—inundations of rivers and the sea, followed by intolerable cold storms of hail, and a drouth that destroyed vegetation, therefore multitudes of people starved to death. Pestilence raged in every quarter, and famine was so severe, that the people demanded human flesh should be sold in market(!) Palestine was devoured by locusts. Nicephorus has employed a chapter to describe the physical evil events, and the miseries of man, in this singular period. He declares that almost all Europe perished.—"pasa de öleto ē Eurōpē." and part of Asia and Africa.

In 409 AD there was an amazing Eclipse of the Sun, so that the Stars were seen in the day time. This was attended with a fearful Comet appearing like a Sword in the sign of Virgo, blazing for the space of four months (from until September.) The greatest Calamities followed that had ever been heard of in the World. All Europe, a great part of Asia, and Africa, was overwhelmed with catastrophes (called Judgments). A severe Drought, Famine and Pestilence, and wars amongst the Nations swept away infinite number of Men. Rome was taken by Alaricus the Goth, and chose an Emperor there.

At this time, the second Angel sounded the Trumpet (sounds made by the Comet interacting with the plasma sheath of Earth), and the Roman Empire suffer a violent death, it resembled a Sea made bloody by the fall of a great Mountain in flames (a volcano?), as described in Rev. 8.8.

In 418 a comet appeared; in 419 several cities of Asia were overturned by an earthquake, and in 420 there was an eruption of Etna. There was also an inundation cause by sea surges in Hampshire, in England, in 419. Famine and pestilence prevailed also in this period. A great hail storm is mentioned under the year 418, and deep snow.

In 418 AD a Comet was seen in Libra, in the Month of September. Great Sedition and Comotions followed throughout Italy, and in Spain. The Africans prepared a great & formidable Fleet and marched towards Rome. Not long after this, the Famous Hierom died. The Heresy of Pelagius caused troubles in the Churches.

423 AD a horrible Comet was seen flaming: as a consequence Emperor Honorius died. Castilus with an Army came upon the Vandals and slaughter multitudes in Spain. The Scots and Picts infested the Britains. 423 AD a great Eclipse of the Moon & a Comet appeared, then showers of Blood (sulphur dioxide & iron oxide in the comet's tail) rained down upon Tholous in France for a whole day. Genseticus Persecuted the professors of the truth in Africa. The King of the Visigoths Theodoricus was slain while at war against Attila.

The next period of general pestilence commenced in the reign of Theodosius the younger, about the year 445 or a year or two earlier. A comet in 442, ushered in a severe winter, in 443, the snow fell to such a depth and lasted for so long in Illyricum, that multitudes of men, women and children perished. The year preceding, the Huns had ravaged the country and destroyed the provisions of food, which added to the calamities. An inundation of the Sea in North and South Wales, 441, preceded the first comet, a second comet appeared in 444. In 445, severe famine and plague afflicted Constantinople, and pestilence appeared in all parts of the world. In 446, Sept. 17, occurred a tremendous earthquake, which demolished the greatest part of the walls of Constantinople, including fifty seven towers. The shocks continued for six months, and extended to a great part of the globe. Many cities were overthrown, the earth, in some places, was thrown into large piles that hills were formed; in others, it opened and swallowed up whole towns. Islands disappeared and were lost in the ocean: the sea receded & left ships on dry land, springs of water were dried up and new fountains appeared, and in this violent phenomena multitudes of fish perished.

The pestilence accompanying, and which rarely fails to attend such agitations of the earth, was universal and of several years duration. In this period, the plague in England corresponded to the terrible volcanic eruptions.

Niceph. lib. 13. ca. 6 and 36. Baron. vol. 5. 20, 114, 176, 294. Zosimus lib. 5. Magd. Cent. 5. ca. 13. Ech. vol 3. 254.

In 448-9, incredible numbers of people died, so that the living could barely bury the dead. And it is important to note that the plague was preceded by the greatest abundance of crops. This happened in the reign of Vortigern, and in time of peace.

In 448 AD a Comet was seen in the sign of Leo, continuing many days, & a tremendous earthquake was felt in the East. Attila oppressed and destroyed a great part of Italy. The Venetians drowned by a Flood. The Eutichean Heresy (people going against the christian church) began to prevail.

Niceph. lib. 14. ca. 46. Bede. Ec. Hist. 51, 52. Baronius, vol. 6. p. 30, 36, 37, 38. Echard. vol. 3. 331. Magdeb. Cent. 5. ca. 13.

An important fact here occurs. In 446, the Picts and Scots had overrun and desolated England, & took the food & provisions. But this famine produced no pestilential disease. It is particularly noticed by the historian, that the plague did not occur, till a year of great plenty had passed. This is one strong proof among others, that famine is not the cause of plague; but often accompanies, and sometimes increases the disease. It often happens that, during extraordinary convulsions of the earth, crops fail. The same cause which affects human health, seems to prevent the growth of vegetables.

The close of this period was peculiarly distressing in Italy, Phrygia, Cappadocia and Galatia, where the famine compelled parents to devour their own children. The pestilence caused much havoc, at the same time, and no remedy could be found. There was inflammation in the whole body and covered with tumours. The disease destroyed the eyes. A cough followed a rash, and caused death on the third day.

This was in the beginning of the rule of the Emperor Marcian, which began in 450 AD, during this year another comet was seen in the heavens and a peculiar light or flame, a severe drought afflicted the earth, and the calamities of this period continued for several years. It must be remarked here that Functius has placed this comet and the beginning of Marcian's reign, in 454. Such differences in chronology cannot fail to embarrass an inquiry like the present, the results of which depend much on correctness of dates (from Niceph. lib. 15 ca. 10.)

From Circiter: In 454 AD, there were diverse appearances of a Blazing Star which was attended with Earthquakes. The Emperor died. Attila after destroying seventy Cities in the East, (author's note: destruction of cities is always blamed on the enemies, not the comets) and conquered the Northern parts, came with five hundred thousand Soldiers, and making fearful devastations in Germany, was himself slain in a bloody Battle with Attius. Rome was taken and ruined by Gensericus (the comets). Historians make mention of two other Comets observed in this Century. The comet of 459 AD which was followed with a terrible Pest which killed many. The other in 488 and as a result the Arian heretics caused great troubles. Gundamond the King of the Vandals became the Author of a great Persecution (of christians?)

Nicephorus and Evagrius give a particular account of an earthquake which left great part of Antioch in ruins in the second year of the Emperor Leo, which was AD 458. A comet is noted under the preceding year. But they say further, that this event took place 347 complete years after the destruction of the city in the reign of Trajan, which was in 117. Now 347 years added to this number, give 464, for the year of the last catastrophe. NOTE: This is a great example of how calculations are made when it comes to events, comet sightings and catastrophes; because calendars were changing, people recorded events according to the year of rule, because they couldn't follow a universal steady calendar.

From Nicephorus. lib. 15. 20. Evagrius. lib. 2. 12 and 14. Byzantine Hist. vol. 15. Evagrius. lib. 2. 14:

In the 311th Olympiad, which covers the years from 465 to 468, a comet appeared. Whether the destruction of Antioch was in 458 or 464, the extent of the shock, through Thrace, Hellespont and the Greek islands, together with the deluges of rain which are said to have swept away whole towns in Bithynia, leave no room to question the approximation of a comet during or near the time.

According to Baronius in the year 467 about the time Anthemius became emperor, pestilence which raged in Rome.

In the following year, a number of houses were overthrown by an earthquake in Vienna. A great eruption of Vesuvius is mentioned in 472, and a severe winter of four months duration, in 473 with deep snow. Followed by plague in Rome.

In the year 480 Constantinople suffered again great damage by an earthquake, which demolished a large number of buildings.

Between 480 to 482, another comet was visible. In 484 was a most terrible and distressing drouth, no vine nor an olive branch survived; the earth was pale and desolate, and the sun was dimmed. Africa was almost abandoned, as a consequence of this event and an accompanying plague.

Baron. vol. 6. 343, 426 and 7. Baronius places the earthquake at Constantinople in 477, but others place it in 480, which is most probably correct. The difference in the chronology of different authors, who relate the events of these early ages, is seldom less than two, three and four years.—The plague infested Scotland in 480.

In 494 an earthquake overturned Laodicea, Hierapolis and Tripoli. According to Functius, this event was in 496.

In 499 a comet appeared which was soon followed by an earthquake which destroyed Neo Cesarea, in Pontus, and an eruption of Vesuvius laid waste all the adjacent country. (Magdeb. vol. 3. Cent. 6. ca. 13.)

Well, that would seem to explain a lot, including the rise and fall of the Roman Empire. Power hungry Rulers & heads of religions have always used the approaches of comets & the catastrophes caused by the comets plasma & electromagnetic interactions with Earth, to further their own agendas. The approach or connection of the plasma tails charged celestial bodies amplify the inner electric balance of planets & moons (planets are like a capacitors). And this causes all the natural phenomena including greatly affecting the psychological well being of humans, animals & all life on Earth.
